

GWEN YVETTE

“To say that Gwen Yvette is a great vocalist is an understatement. She is phenomenal! To experience her live is to fall in love with the soaring strength of her voice and melodic tone. Add to that her professionalism, plus the fact that she is an exceptional entertainer and you have the makings of a star.

Gwen and her band have performed several sold out shows at my venue and each one had the audience dancing to their non-stop grooves. I look forward to their return.”

.ABOUT

Gwen Yvette is an independent R&B/Soul singer and songwriter from Beaufort, SC. She has shared the stage with Big Daddy Kane, Carl Thomas and the legendary Patti LaBelle.

An artist with extraordinary talent and vocal range, the Harlem-born, St. Helena Island product first picked up a microphone at the tender age of three and performed at community events. Gwen first entered the music scene as a professional singer in the early 1990's, performing with a popular local band and was later invited to tour with notable musicians, Lattimore and Roy C. In 2012, the songstress had a successful run on Fox's national television series, "The X Factor".

In 2015, Gwen Yvette launched her solo career and in February 2016, she released her debut single titled, "So In Love". This release propelled Gwen into the spotlight, garnering national media recognition, performance opportunities nationwide and a rising star status. That year, she also won Female R&B Artist of the Year at the South Carolina Music Awards. In June of 2017, Gwen released her long-awaited album titled, "Love, Dreams & Visions", a project that exemplifies her love of music.

Gwen Yvette is one of the most sought-after singers throughout South Carolina and beyond, as is evident from her booking in Accra, Ghana.
